This year's contest ran over a single weekend from Thursday, February 1 to Monday, February 5, 2024. During that time, teams of three students researched, modeled, and wrote a solution to an open-ended real world modeling problem. The 2024 MCM was an online contest, where teams registered and obtained contest materials through COMAP's MCM Website.

The 2024 MCM problems represented a variety of challenging problems spanning the familiar to new. Each problem required teams to apply unique mathematical modeling skills to answer the questions posed. All three problems were created by the MCM Problem Committee, a unique blend of academicians and industry professionals with many years of mathematical modeling experience. Teams again had to be at the top of their game to excel.

For problem A, the students examined the impacts of adaptive sex ratio variations for a specific parasite on an ecosystem. In this case, the ratio of male to female sea lampreys is affected by resource availability during the lamprey's larval stage; low food availability leads to slower growth and a higher ratio of males to females and vice versa. Teams were asked to develop a mathematical model to predict the impact of this variation on the lake or sea habitats where sea lampreys live. In their model, the students needed to consider the advantages and disadvantages to the sea lamprey and other species, as well as analyze the impact on the stability of the ecosystem.

For the B problem, teams focused on modeling search and rescue operations for deep sea submersibles shuttling tourists to the bottom of the Ionian Sea. Students were asked to build a mathematical model to predict the location of a submersible over time in case of a loss of communication with a mother ship and possible mechanical defects. Their model needed to account for currents, differing densities of sea water, and the geography of the sea floor, and include an analysis of the uncertainty in their prediction. The teams were asked to expand their model to recommend initial points of deployment and search patterns to minimize the time to locate a lost submersible. They also needed to include a consideration of additional search equipment and its cost and extrapolate their models to other locations and additional numbers of lost submersibles. Their report needed to include a two-page memo to the Greek government aimed at getting approval for tourist operations.

For the C problem, teams were provided with data from a number of tennis matches played at Wimbledon in 2023. The students were asked to develop a model from this data that captured the flow of play, considering the concept of momentum to identify which player was performing better and by how much. They were asked to use this model to assess the claim that flow is random and not caused by any kind of momentum and create a visualization to depict match flow. The teams needed to test their model against one or more matches to determine how well it predicted swings, which factors were important in swings, and how generalizable their model was to other conditions including different surfaces, tournaments, and other sports. Finally, the teams needed to write a two-page memo summarizing their results with advice for coaches on how to prepare their players to respond to events and improve their play.

A selection from the Outstanding solution papers will be featured in The UMAP Journal, along with commentaries from the problem authors and judges. All 18,525 of the competing teams are to be congratulated for their excellent work and enthusiasm for mathematical modeling and interdisciplinary problem solving.

Major funding for the MCM is provided by COMAP. Additional support is provided by the Institute for Operations Research and the Management Sciences (INFORMS), The Society for Industrial and Applied Mathematics (SIAM), The Mathematical Association of America (MAA), The American Statistical Association (ASA) and The American Mathematical Society (AMS). COMAP's Mathematical Contest in Modeling and Interdisciplinary Contest in Modeling are unique among modeling competitions in that they are the only international contests in which students work in teams to find a solution. Centering its educational philosophy on mathematical modeling, COMAP uses mathematical tools to explore real-world problems. It serves the educational community as well as the world of work by preparing students to become better informed—and prepared—citizens, consumers, and workers.
